

FABULOUS WEALTH

Said to be Stored in Depths of the Frozen North.

SOME TANGIBLE EVIDENCE

Brought Home by Prospectors in Alaska and the Yukon District, in British Columbia - Marvellous Stories Related of Mineral Richness of the New Eldorado. Labor is $15 a Day, with 100 Days' Work Guaranteed - Excitement Among the People Indescribable.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 15.-A story rivaling in intensity of interest that told of the fabulous wealth of Monte Cristo, was related by the passengers of the little steamer Excelsior, which has just arrived from St. Michaels, Alaska. Millions upon millions of virgin gold, according to the story awaits the fortunate miner who has the hardihood and courage to penetrate into the unknown depths of the Yukon district.

There was tangible evidence on the little steamer of the truth of the story told by the travelers, for in the cabin were scores of sacks filled to the very mouth with "dust" taken from the placers of the far frozen north. The amount brought in is variously estimated at from $500,000 to $750,000.

There is in the Excelsior some forty people, among them some women from what is now known as the Clondyke mines, though only 15 of these had been actually engaged in mining. There were among them men who had been for more than ten years facing the dangers and hardships of the frozen north in the hope of making a rich find, but who steadily failed. But now they come back with fortunes stored in their grip sacks and untold millions to be picked up in the country of which so little is known.

The new Eldorado lies just across the Alaska boundary in British territory. It is of recent discovery, but already there are at least 3,000 people on the ground and more are flocking in that direction. The discovery of the Clondyke regions presents a story that is uniquely interesting. Around Forty Mile on the Yukon, is a tribe of Indians known as the Slickers, and with them is a man who years ago was known as George Cormack, but who is now called "Slick George."

In September last at the head of a party of Indians, he left his hut near Forty Mile camp and started in a southerly direction, saying he intended to find a new gold field before he returned. He came back two weeks later and startled the miners with the announcement that forty miles away there was gold to be found in plenty. The streams abounded with the yellow metal and all that was needed was for somebody to pick it up. Many persons looked for the place, and in time the word reached Forty Mile camp that untold riches could be found along the bottom of Bonanza Creek and its tributaries. Men who had failed at the former camp immediately packed up their belongings and set out for the new fields. It was a hard and trying journey, but that was nothing with the promise of millions at the end of the route.

The following is an abstract of a letter received by the Excelsior, just arrived here from Alaska. It was sent from the Clondyke region by a prominent and wealthy young business man of San Francisco, to his brother in this city. "The excitement on the river is indescribable and the output of the new Clondyke district almost beyond belief. Men who had nothing last fall are now worth a fortune. One man has worked forty square feet of his claim and is going out with about $40,000 in dust. One quarter of claims are now selling at from $15,000 to $30,000. The estimate of the district given is thirteen miles, with an average value of $300,000 to the claim, some are valued as high as $1,000,000 each. At Dawson sacks of dust are thrown under the counters in the stores for safe keeping. Some of the stories are so fabulous that I am afraid to repeat them for fear of being suspected of the infection. Labor is $15 a day and board with 100 days work guaranteed, so you can imagine how difficult it is to hold employees.

"If reports are true, it is the biggest placer discovery ever made in the world for though other diggings have been found quite as rich in spots, no such extent of discovery has been known which prospected and worked so high right through.

A Christian Endeavor Romance. SAN FRANCISCO, July 15.-A romantic incident connected with the recent Christian Endeavor convention in this city developed to-day, when Mrs. Mary E. Davis, of Louisville, Ky., was wedded to George C. King, of this city, at the Palace Hotel, in the presence of a few mutual friends, most of whom were members of the Kentucky delegation. King was formerly a clerk in the employ of the uncle of the bride, but was sent out here as their agent after Miss Davis' parents had discouraged his suit, and had not seen the young lady for six years when she surprised him by meeting him at the convention. While there had been no understanding between the young couple, prior to their meeting, for after making up their minds they promptly completed arrangements for the wedding, which has just been celebrated.

A Crown Prince in Danger. NEW YORK, July 15.-Prince Eule Wha, heir apparent to the crown of Corea, is said to be in danger of losing his life. This young Corean arrived in America several months ago, ostensibly to complete his education in an American college; in reality, he came, it is asserted, to avoid hired assassins, who have followed him. Despite the fact that the United States offers to the prince a refuge far more secure than his native country, gossip has it that he is continually dodging men who are hired by the Corean progressive party, which is against the present dynasty, to kill him.

A Had Counterfeit. WASHINGTON, July 15.-Chief Hazen, of the secret service, has given notice of the discovery of a new counterfeit ten dollar silver certificate. It is of the series of 1891, check letter D with the small carmine seal, the portrait of Hendricks and the names of Messrs. Tilden and Morgan as register and treasurer respectively. The counterfeit is described as apparently a wood cut production very poorly executed, the seal being light pink instead of carmine, the numbering irregular and the printing and engraving bad.

Old Battle Made New. JOLIET, Ill., July 15.-The McKenna re-rolling steel mill has made a test run and everything started off in good shape. This plant is the only one of its kind in the world, and this test was the first time in the history of the steel working art that old worn out iron mills have been as good as new. The plant will start up to run steadily within a few days and give employment to 300 men.

BLANCHE LAMONT'S UNCLE Visits the Condemned Murderer of His Niece - Thinks He is Innocent. SAN FRANCISCO, July 15.-Rev. Hugh Lamont, uncle of Blanche Lamont, for whose murder Theodore Durrant has been sentenced to death, has visited Durrant at the San Quentin prison. Speaking of his visit Rev. Lamont said: "Judging from the evidence I believe Durrant guilty, but his demeanor is that of an innocent man. I had no intention of making public what occurred between us, but in justice to that unhappy boy I have changed my mind. I visited Durrant at San Quentin and conversed with him in Captain Edgar's office. We greeted each other, and Durrant held out his hand to me saying: 'I suppose Mr. Lamont, you are attending the Christian Endeavor. I greatly regret my inability to avail myself of the same privilege.'

During the conversation Rev. Lamont said: 'I believe in your guilt, but if you are an innocent man the evidence will be soon forthcoming.' Durrant replied that he was an innocent man and hoped that his innocence would be proven before his death, but at any rate after the execution. Durrant refused to discuss the question as to the probable murderer and after a little other conversation the interview ended."

THE SORROWING SISTER. Miss Maud Durrant Awaits the Fate of Her Condemned Brother. San Francisco Examiner: On the other side of the Atlantic, in the German capital, Miss Maud Durrant has for two years been waiting to know the fate of her only brother. Little has been said of this sister, far off in a foreign land, and only the most intimate friends of the Durrants have realized the extent of her suffering.

There has been considerable surmise as to why she did not hasten home immediately after the arrest of her brother, some time during the trial, or after the sentence. The Durrants have been careful from the first to keep their daughter in the background, screened from the public view. Even the close friends of the family are unaware what course the daughter will pursue if everything shall go against the son. It is the general belief that Miss Durrant will not return if her brother goes to the scaffold; that she will stay in Berlin, and perhaps never come back.

The truth is that the sister across the water has never for a moment thought of neglecting her brother if it shall become necessary for him to give up his life. Miss Durrant intends to be here to give her life-long comfort and air the support and affection a sister can give at such a time.

"Mamma, mamma," she has kept writing, "if it comes to the worst, send me word in time. Don't leave it until it is too late." At first the parents opposed the return of their daughter. They feared the nervous strain, the terrible shock, would be too severe a tax on her health. They advised her to remain where she was. But in her loyalty to her childhood playmate, Miss Durrant thrust advice to the winds.

"If it comes to the worst, I shall go home to my brother," she wrote: "I could not be satisfied otherwise." So the parents consented. The money for her fare was forwarded to Germany, and several months later, during the past few months, Miss Durrant has packed her trunks and prepared to start for home. Each time she was prevented by favorable news from her parents. The young lady has been in constant communication with her parents by post and cable since the first day of their great sorrow. Mr. Durrant has prepared two special cablegrams, and the daughter understands her movements are to be guided by them. One reads: "Everything favorable. Stay where you are." The other is: "Come home immediately. Will telegraph you at New York."

Alone in a great city, at a time she should have been surrounded by loving friends, Miss Durrant experienced the intensest form of sorrow. No one in the German capital knew at first that the beautiful American girl who was studying at the Royal High School of Music, was the sister of the San Francisco medical student charged with the Emmanuel Church murders. For a time the girl guarded her secret well. She dreaded notoriety, and she could not bear to have anyone know that her brother was accused of a diabolical crime. However much she grieved in private, she kept up bravely before the world. But it was not long until every one in the American colony in Berlin knew of Miss Durrant's sorrow. She had many sympathizers, but she reserved about her brother and people respected her discretion to talk on the subject. It was not until the supreme court rendered its adverse judgment that the sister broke down and opened her heart to her friends.

During her two years' residence in Berlin Miss Durrant has become a favorite in German, as well as American social circles. She is a bright, attractive girl, with winning manners and a genial disposition. She is of the blonde type and is considered beautiful of form and face. When scarcely five years of age she displayed unusual musical talent. She had to be lifted on the piano stool, but when once there she stayed for hours, playing popular airs by ear and improvising little melodies. Before she went to Europe she composed several very pretty ballads. The young lady is now in the last term of her second year at the Royal High School of Music. It is her intention to take a four years' course. Miss Durrant is accomplished in other lines than music. She is something of a sketch artist and is an expert at wood carving.

Through all the dark days the Durrant family has passed during the last two years, the sister has never wavered in her faith that her brother is innocent. And what is the cheering message she sends him?

"I have as much love for and confidence in you to-day, Theo, as I had the morning I kissed you good-bye and whispered, 'Be a good boy, dearie, and be sure you graduate.'"

Besides removing impurities, and toning up the run-down system, it cures any blood disease, it matters not how deep-seated or obstinate, which other so-called blood remedies fail to reach. It is a real blood purifier for red blood disease.

Dr. A. A. Smith, of Greenacres, Ind., writes: "I had a bad case of Eczema of the skin that I became absolutely helpless - unable to take any food or handle myself in any way. I took many patent medicines, but they did not reach my trouble. One day I bought a bottle of Swift's Specific. I used it as directed, and in a few days I was able to eat and sleep, and now feel fine."

WOMEN UP IN ARMS

Against the Kansas City Order that Female Prisoners Work on Rock-piles.

KANSAS CITY, July 15.-The order of the police commissioners of Kansas City, Kansas, that women prisoners must work on the stone pile along with the men, has caused a great commotion, and has not yet been put into effect. Perhaps it may never be.

The Current Event Club, an organization of women, has expressed itself as immeasurably shocked and has called an indignation meeting to protest against the "threatened disgrace and degradation of womanhood."

The members threaten that the enforcement of the order means the retirement of the police commissioners from office at the first opportunity, and as women vote in Kansas municipal elections the threat is not regarded as altogether an idle one, and may have its desired effect. Their principal objection to the rock pile plan is that part of the order is compelling the women to work without skirts and wear overalls instead. The police officials stand by that order and say that the first women prisoners whose fines are not paid will go to the rock pile.

NEW FIELD FOR X-RAYS

France's Scheme to Use Them in the Customs Service.

New York Sun: Several months ago the French government began a series of experiments with the X-rays with the object of learning whether or not these could be employed to advantage in the customs service-particularly in the examination of small parcels coming into France through the packet post. These experiments have proved so satisfactory that more are to be tried soon on a more extensive scale in the regular working of the service, and should they be found practical, all travelers' baggage and imports of general merchandise coming into France will be examined in this way.

The apparatus used in the experiments, according to the statement of George Pallain, director general of customs, was the ordinary Crookes tube, with fluorescent screens to receive the images projected. M. Pallain is not a scientific man, and his explanation of the experiments leaves much to be desired, but at the present stage of the work he declines to be more explicit. He describes the apparatus used, in a general way, to be a machine something in the form of a large opera glass, the circular ends of which were fitted with the fluorescent screens. The object to be examined was placed between the Crookes tube and the large opera glass.

"The result," says M. Pallain, "was astonishing. The first thing I looked at was an ordinary box of cigars, wrapped in heavy paper. I was able to see them distinctly, and to count them, first on the top layer, and then on the ends. Afterward we placed a plush arm chair in position, and I was able to see the interior, springs and all. Last, we took a small box that had come by packet post; it was tightly sealed, and the X-rays disclosed the fact that it contained a pair of sleeve buttons, which were perfectly distinct."

"The practicality of this mode of examination is what makes the experiment valuable. The apparatus used is simple in construction, easily manipulated, and quick in results. The operation requires but a few minutes, and it may be conducted in any room which may be made semi-dark. In the room which we have used for experimenting, we did nothing in the way of preparation but draw the curtains."

"It is undoubtedly true that smugglers and other evil-disposed persons would be able to circumvent the certainty of detection of contraband articles in trunks and packages by such an examination; but that does not disturb us, because, should we adopt the X-ray method, it will be merely used as an aid, and in no sense regarded as a determinative and infallible. At present, for instance, inspectors are obliged to open everything. This takes a great deal of time, and makes trouble for officials and travelers alike; and, even at the best, such an inspection must be very often superficial. Now, that is just where the new method comes in. Every article of baggage will first be subjected to the X-rays; then, if the rays disclose nothing, the article will be passed without opening. If, on the other hand, the rays disclose dutiable articles, or evidences which are suspicious-and I believe that any agency which smugglers would use to render the trunk impervious to the rays would of itself necessarily look suspicious when outlined on the fluorescent screen-that trunk or packages will be opened just as it is now. So you see, after all, the same time will make the inspection much more thorough, because even the expert fingers of a customs inspector do not always land on the contraband article, and as for his eyes, the X-rays are so far the only spectacles with which one may look through wood and pasteboard."

M. Pallain's apparatus is now being placed in the customs rooms of several of the larger railway stations, and, providing that further experiments prove its practicability, it will be adopted generally by the customs service.

WHAT AN ACCIDENT

Had to Do with the Daily Life of a Wheeling Citizen.

There is something novel in reading incidents connected with the life of people we know. Even if these are of the most trivial nature, the fact of their being bound up with the life of a neighbor makes them interesting. If it is only a readable notice of another man's woes or sorrows, curiosity alone tempts us, when we know there are others on the list, to wonder who comes next. The report that follows comes from No. 1412 Market street, the home of Mrs. Caroline Ritz, who some four years ago made a mistake and was precipitated into the cellar. The immediate result of the accident were gotten over, when it was noticed that across the loins there was always more or less pain. In speaking about it, Mrs. Ritz says: "I suffered terribly with my kidneys the last two years and nothing did me any good until I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at the Logan Drug Co. They fixed me up in a very short time and I have felt well since. The pain across my loins was of a sharp, darting nature. I could at times scarcely move about and could not rest at nights. I had frequent attacks of headache and dizziness and a heavy, dull, bearing down pain in the bladder. The secretions of the kidneys were frequent, very scanty, and I felt generally out of sorts. From my experience with Doan's Kidney Pills I advise anyone having the slightest indication of kidney trouble to use them and reap the benefit of that time honored expression, 'A stitch in time saves nine.'"
